low his efforts. Some miners claim that giant powder will not explode from the heat of the sun, but one of the miners at the Gey-ser-Marion has found out different. A few days ago he left seven or eight sticks thawing on the hillside while he went into the tunnel to prepare for shooting. On his return he found a hole in the ground, marking the place where the powder had been. Luckily no damage was done. With the new engine and hoist at the Hillside, progress is comparatively rapid, but considerable trouble is experienced from the water, the flow of which continues about the same as at first. A depth of 130 feet has been rached, and the formation is a black shale. It is thought that a change should occur before long, and the vein should lie next to the shale.

Hoist For the Good Enough. The work of sinking the shaft on the Good Enough has been stopped until arrangements can be made for hoist. Ing. says the Tintic Miner, the shaft being too deep to handle the waste with an "armstrong." The bottom of the shaft shows a fine vein of black quariz and spar, and it is the intention of the owners, Messrs. A. Burch and E. Christensen, to continue the work in the shaft. The property was eccently surveyed for patent, and final anollication will be made at once. The Good Enough is only a fractional claim, but as its name implies, was considered good excugh to warrant considerable work. It adjoins the Eagle on the southeast and the Snowlake on the northwest. Both of the properties have produced some very high grade ore, and both are looked upon to repeat the wonderful record of their neighbor on the other side of the mountain, the Grand Central Good Enough has been stopped until Statesman, Boise, Ida.: A. Graves, a mining expert of Denver, is in the city this week. Mr. Graves was chairman of the committee on credentials at the late mining congress held in Salt Lake. He is here in the interests of Chicago people who wish to invest in Idaho mines. A deal has been consummated for property in the Willow Creek district, and the property will probably be turned over in a few days. Mr. Graves says the demand for mining property is steadily increasing and while a boom is not to be expected a great deal of mining property will change hands in the near future.

Several of the old camps in Beaver district have attracted his attention of late, and while he has not made thorough and exhaustive examinations of the mines there visited by him, he is quite well pleased with what he saw in the south and probably will return there at an early day. Mr. Hutchings is a graduate of the Columbia School of Mines, a branch institution of Columbia college of New York, besides which he has studied engineering and other technical branches calculated to fit him for a successful career in mining.

It is a sad coincidence that the funeral services over Mr. Lewis should be held the same day and almost the same hour as those of Fred C. Sansome of Salt Lake City. The young men were first cousins and both died away from home.
